MAJOR-GENERAL GEORGE II. CRCOK. CHICAGO, March 21.—Major-General George II. Crook, UnitedStatesArmy, in command of the Department of the Missouri, died at the Grand Pacific Hotel at 7:15 o'clock this morning of heart disease. There had not been the slightest warning that General Crook was not perfectly well. He was at army headquartersall day yesterday, and last night

his usual health, and in accordance with his custom, began exercising with the weights and pulleys connected with an apparatus for the purpose, which he kept in his room. After exercising a few minutes he stopped and lay down upon a lounge, saying that he felt a difficulty in breathing. A few moments later he called out to his wife: 'Oh Mary, Mary; I need some help, I can't get my breath. said that the defects of the bill were in its moderations and that its best effect would be to serve notice that combinations in restraint of trade and product to would not be tolerated.

Mr. Vance then addressed the Senate. The trusts (as every intelligent man knew) were protected by the high tariff and were enabled to work their iniquitous pressure under buttresses afforded by the tariff law.

Mr. Allison replied to Mr. Vest's argument as to the connection between high duties and trusts, taking the ground that all the great combinations were practically outside of the tariff and independent on the tariff. He was not sure but that if sugar were on the free list there would not be still a combination among the sugar refineries. bur company is well spoken of this season.

It may be said of Robert Downing, the tragedian who is to present "The Gladidator" at the Opera House next Wednes day and Thursday evenings that he is a man to whom nature has given the proportions of an athlete, the symmetry of a Greek statue, and the strong populsion of a bright, clear, wide intelligence, representing a force which in the theatre world compels admiration. He is a picture of manhood in physicial development, full-chested, proad-shouldered, muscled like a Hercules, with a fine licad, well poised on a sturdy neck, a handsone face, smooth under the touch of youth, but gives character by dark eyes that catch their expression from passing thoughts or troubled passion; has a voice of great depth and volume and romance, yet musical and at will tenderly pathotic.
